

About Me

I am the youngest of three siblings. Growing up as the youngest I was always referred to as the little brother. They set good examples for me which made me work that much harder to live up to those examples. The hard work they had in the classroom, on the court, and on the field were inspirational to me.

My dad worked as an electrician. He was very handy when it came from fixing and building things that I took a hold to. I enjoyed helping him whenever an appliance was not working properly and setting up any new appliances that we would buy for the house. That is why I decided to pursue an engineering degree when I entered college.
